Your East Vancouver Condo Neighbourhood

2300 KINGSWAY HAS THE LOCATION IN EAST VANCOUVER

GREEN IS GOOD

Phase One offers two distinct East Vancouver condominium buildings designed by the world-famous sustainable architecture team of Hotson Bakker Boniface Haden. The 22-storey tower offers 197 living spaces and the 8-storey mid-rise has 138 residences, both offering stunning north- and south-facing views. 2300 Kingsway is designed to meet LEED® Silver accreditation for the residential and retail components and LEED® Gold status for the childcare facility. The water- and heat-saving technology reduces day-to-day living costs. Green roofs on both towers plus nearby green spaces equal healthy and sustainable living – indoors and out. 2300 Kingsway – the East Vancouver condominiums where green living comes alive.

As marketer Bob Rennie sees it, the homes in the new development at Kingsway and Nanaimo are noteworthy not only for their value; they also further his belief that such development will continue to blur Vancouver's east-west divide.

"I've been preaching about 'moving' east since 2002," says Rennie, whose Rennie Marketing Systems is coordinating the sales campaign for the 2300 Kingsway project.

"I think the east-west divide is disappearing, and eventually we'll start hearing people just asking whether or not you live in the city."

Phase 1 of the development is comprised of a 22-storey highrise and a mid-rise, and went on sale on May 29. The bulk of those units have been snapped up and demand is now high for the 96 homes in phase two. (The project will also eventually include a 37-space childcare centre for toddlers and preschool-aged children, to be run by the City of Vancouver.

"Affordability is key in this equation," says Rennie.
". . . The views are great. You can see water from the third floor; those views would be much more expensive downtown."

Designer Ada Bonini of BYU Design says she worked hard at giving the interiors a contemporary appearance, while staying conscious of pricing.

"We budgeted the funds into more important spots, like the composite stone counter in the bathrooms and kitchens, and the appliances," she says. The stainless steel stovetops use natural gas, which is an unexpected touch at this price.

"Then we used laminate flooring and ceramic tile, which are less expensive."

Bonini chose a palette of cream, oatmeal, cafe au lait, and chocolate. Kitchen cabinetry has been designed to feel like part of the furniture, since it's visible from the living room and will need to be compatible with a homeowner's other pieces.

Kitchen countertops include deep overhangs to serve as breakfast bars. Bathrooms in many of the one-bedroom apartments have been made "cheater" ensuites, and include open shelving under the sink for linens. The sink is a square raised bowl, echoing the neat lines of the soaker tub.

Phase two has been dubbed Eldorado in honour of the hotel on the site, which was originally oriented primarily toward business travellers. It's here that Rennie has more than a marketing connection: his mother worked for years as a waitress in the dining room.

"The businessmen started moving away to stay at other places, and the hotel wasn't viable," explains Rennie. "The beer parlour became the focus, and it eventually became a detriment to the neighbourhood."

The 2300 Kingsway/Eldorado project will be complete in 2013.

Location, Price and Views - 3 Reasons Why You Should Buy at the East Vancouver 2300 Kingsway Condo Project!

There are many reasons why a savvy homebuyer or investor should consider purchasing a 2300 Kingsway Vancouver East condo for sale as it approaches the grand opening launch in the spring 2010. The three main reasons why as pointed out by the New Home Buyers' Guide include the incredible up and coming Collingwood neighbourhood in the East Vancouver real estate market, in addition to the incredible views as there are no other tall buildings surrounding you. Residents will enjoy water, mountain and city views from their living rooms and outdoor living spaces. In addition, the new Vancouver East condos at 2300 Kingsway real estate project will feature an affordable price point for any purchaser in the Vancouver real estate market to get into as this ground level opportunity is accurately priced for today's value. One of the most important decisions in your life should be based on location, location, location. The historical significance of the location requirement for your home purchase is never more evident than in Vancouver right now. The 2300 Kingsway Vancouver condos for sale are well situated in an urban community on the rise. Conveniently situated in the Collingwood neighbourhood of East Vancouver, the Wall Group presents 2300 Kingsway condos for sale in which more than half of the Phase 1 release of new homes are priced well below $300,000, making them the most affordable East Vancouver condo project this year! However, as Rennie Marketing and The Wall Group have explained, although 2300 Kingsway Vancouver condos are affordable, but they also contain the high end features and finishes that everyone is looking for. These include downtown condominium style finishes like stainless steel appliances, granite counters and gas cooktop in addition to wood flooring and spacious floor plans. In addition, the East Vancouver condos for sale at 2300 Kingsway by Wall Group are sustainable and feature healthier homes for residents. The architecture will definitely transform the corner of Kingsway and Nanaimo and will forever push the limits in high-style urban living in the East Vancouver real estate market. The twenty two story high-rise also features an eight story low-rise and the entire East Vancouver 2300 Kingsway condo development will be LEED Silver certified. Also, for those families moving into the 2300 Kingway Vancouver condo community, there will be a childcare facility that will have LEED Gold standards and can hold up to thirty seven preschool children and toddlers. The 2300 Kingsway Vancouver childcare facility will also have a six thousand square foot outdoor play area, nature friendly landscaping, garden and recycling. The new and exciting East Vancouver real estate neighbourhood at 2300 Kingsway condos by the Wall Group are coming May 29th for advanced preview sales and will feature a collection of one and two bedroom suites.
